Notes

- Antitrust and IP announcement.
- Discussed the revised introductory sections of our draft.
  - Jan pointed out that the user-centric values need to be more prominent. We discussed several ways to accomplish this, and eventually decided to swap paragraph order to accomplish it.
  - We discussed the terms around "personal identity data", such as "personal data", "personally identifiable information", etc. Different standards use different terms for this, and the primary thing is that there needs to be consistency.
  - We added another paragraph to emphasize the importance of there not just being standards, but in the effort and processes people used to comply with them.
  - With no dissenting voice, the updated version of the introductory material was approved, and the draft will now go to copy editing.
- The appendix to our document was a start at material for an implementation guide. Plans for such a guide are currently at the stage of "general agreement across groups that we want such a guide". It was moved to its own document to make sure that none of it (including comments) were lost in the interim.
- The diagram was removed from Problem #10 because all items listed in the problem recommendations apply equally to all issuers and verifiers. The concern was that the diagram may have suggested otherwise to some readers.
